The New Jim Crow: Mass Incarceration ... If you think history is a cold recitation of dates and the names of kings and battles, you owe it to yourself to check out Big History. And the best introduction I've found to that fascinating new field is Tamim Ansary's brilliant 50,000-year survey, The Invention of Yesterday. Unlike many of the pioneering books in Big History, Ansary's is ...

How the Other Half Lives (1890) by Jacob Riis: Though nonfiction, Jacob Riis' earth-shattering work of photojournalism remains required reading for all Americans — immigrants or not. It brings readers to the squalid fringes of society and shows them the dire consequences of marginalizing peoples of different backgrounds and opinions.

New York is the nation's third-largest grape-producing state, after California and Washington. In 2004, New York's wine and grape industry brought $6 billion into the state economy. The state has 30,000 acres (120 km²) of vineyards, 212 wineries, and produced 200 million bottles of wine in 2004. New York was heavily glaciated in the ice age leaving much of the state with deep, fertile, though ...
